

Liebental, Odesa colonies. 1852 Parish Lists

Kleinliebental, Grossliebental, Josefstal, Mariental, Franzfeld

Saratov Archives. Fond 1166, Opus 1, Delo 409

As the Catholic colonies of Novaya Rossiya grew and began to prosper, their pleas for proper pastoral care were heard in Rome. In 1847, the administrations of Pope Pius IX and Czar Nicholas I agreed to the establishment of a separate diocese for South Russia's German Catholic colonists. The new Diocese of Tiraspol, as it came to be called, would eventually have its administrative headquarters in the city of Saratov, and would have its own bishop, a new Cathedral and a Seminary to train native German priests.

The new diocese would encompass the Gubernias of Kherson, Taurida, Astrakhan, and Saratov. The Bessarabia Oblast and the Trans-Caucasus regions were also included. The German colonies of Grosswerder and Kleinwerder were added at a later date. The directory finally established for the diocese included 52 parishes, each with its own church, and 40 affiliated congregations with their own church or prayer chapel. The new diocese would minister to 200,000 German Catholics and also 70,000 Catholics from Poland, Georgia and Armenia.

The first major task of the new administration was to conduct a census of Catholics who would be served by the Diocese of Tiraspol. The so-called 1852 Confession Lists provide a registry, by household, of the Catholics living in the German Colonies of South Russia in 1852. The priests in each parish were instructed to provide a list of those Catholics who went to Confession and received Holy Communion at Easter in 1852. Some parish priests included the names of the young children in each family as well. Some did as instructed, and listed only those who had received the sacraments during the Easter season.

Following are the Catholic family lists of Kleinliebental Parish, which included Grossliebental, and of Josefstal Parish, which included Mariental and Franzfeld.

Many thanks to Tanya Wellman and to Ina Klaus, for their many hours in cross-referencing the families to the 1816 and 1858 censuses, along with detailed notes.
